How might the Internet of Things look in an education setting?

Every pupil issued with a wearable device that logs their attendance

Digital beacons that transmit lesson information directly to each pupil’s device as they enter the classroom

Personalised learning materials that analyse assessment and usage data

Automatic ordering of stationery and other supplies

Weather station devices that upload data to a national or international database, providing real-life information for science learning